The series drew inspiration from a variety of sources, including the fantasy role-playing game Dungeons & Dragons and video games. It was produced using hand-drawn animation; action and dialogue for episodes were decided by storyboard artists based on rough outlines. Because each episode took roughly eight to nine months to complete, multiple episodes were worked on concurrently. The cast members recorded their lines in group recordings, and the series regularly employed guest actors for minor and recurring characters. Each episode runs for about eleven minutes; pairs of episodes are often telecast to fill half-hour program slots. Cartoon Network announced on September 29, 2016, that the series would conclude in 2018, after the airing of its tenth season. The series finale aired on September 3, 2018, which was followed by the Adventure Time: Distant Lands specials and the Adventure Time: Fionna and Cake spin-off, which were released on Max.^{}^{} As of June 2024, two additional spin-offs, entitled Adventure Time: Side Quests and Adventure Time: Heyo BMO, have also been greenlit by Cartoon Network Studios.

Adventure Time follows the adventures of a boy named [Finn the Human](/wiki/Finn_the_Human "Finn the Human") (voiced by [Jeremy Shada](/wiki/Jeremy_Shada "Jeremy Shada")), and his best friend and adoptive brother [Jake the Dog](/wiki/Jake_the_Dog "Jake the Dog") ([John DiMaggio](/wiki/John_DiMaggio "John DiMaggio")), who has magical powers to change shape and size at will. [Pendleton Ward](/wiki/Pendleton_Ward "Pendleton Ward"), the series' creator, describes Finn as a "fiery little kid with strong morals".^{[cite_note-awn-12]} Jake, on the other hand, is based on Tripper Harrison, [Bill Murray](/wiki/Bill_Murray "Bill Murray")'s character in Meatballs (film). This means that while Jake is somewhat carefree, he will "sit [Finn] down and give him some decent advice if he really needs it".^{[cite_ref-awn_12-1]} Finn and Jake live in the post-apocalyptic Land of Ooo, which was ravaged by a cataclysmic event known as the "Mushroom War", a nuclear war that destroyed civilization a thousand years before the series' events. Throughout the series, Finn and Jake interact with major characters, including [Princess Bubblegum](/wiki/Princess_Bubblegum "Princess Bubblegum") ([Hynden Walch](/wiki/Hynden_Walch "Hynden Walch")), the sovereign of the Candy Kingdom and a sentient piece of chewing gum; the [Ice King](/wiki/Ice_King "Ice King") ([Tom Kenny](/wiki/Tom_Kenny "Tom Kenny")), a menacing but largely misunderstood ice wizard; [Marceline the Vampire Queen](/wiki/Marceline_the_Vampire_Queen "Marceline the Vampire Queen") ([Olivia Olson](/wiki/Olivia_Olson "Olivia Olson")), a thousand-year-old vampire and rock music enthusiast; [Lumpy Space Princess](/wiki/Lumpy_Space_Princess "Lumpy Space Princess") (Pendleton Ward "BMO (character)")), a melodramatic and immature princess made out of "lumps"; [BMO \(character\)](/wiki/Niki_Yang "Niki Yang"), a sentient video game console-shaped robot that lives with Finn and Jake; and [Flame Princess](/wiki/List_of_Adventure_Time_characters#Flame_Princess "List of Adventure Time characters") ([Jessica DiCicco](/wiki/Jessica_DiCicco "Jessica DiCicco")), a flame elemental and ruler of the Fire Kingdom.^{[cite_ref-toons_13-0]}^{[cite_note-toons-13]}^{[cite_ref-candyland_14-0]}^{[cite_note-candyland-14]}^{[cite_ref-characters_15-0]}^{[cite_note-characters-15]}

Development

Concept and creation

Main article:  "Adventure Time (short film)")

According to series creator Pendleton Ward, the show's style was influenced by his time attending the California Institute of the Arts (CalArts) and his experiences working as a writer and storyboard artist on The Marvelous Misadventures of Flapjack, a series that ran on Cartoon Network from 2008 until 2010. In an interview with Animation World Network etwork">Animation World Network, Ward said he strove to combine Adventure Time's subversive humor with "beautiful" moments, using Hayao Miyazaki's film My Neighbor Totoro as inspiration for the latter.^{[8]} Ward has also named Home Movies and Dr. Katz, Professional Therapist as influences, largely because both shows are "relaxing" and feature "conversational dialogue that feels natural [and is neither] over the top [nor] cartoony and shrill".^{[12]}

The series can trace its origin to a seven-minute, stand-alone animated short film of the same name (this short was later identified as the show's pilot post facto). Produced by Frederator Studios, the short was created by Ward almost entirely by himself, and its production concluded in early 2006.^{[13]} It was first broadcast on Nicktoons Network on January 11, 2007,^{[13]}^{[14]}^{: 24 } and was re-broadcast as part of Frederator's anthology show Random! Cartoons on December 7, 2008.^{[15]}^{[16]} After its initial release, the video became a viral hit on the Internet.^{[8]}^{[14]}^{: 25 } Frederator then pitched an Adventure Time series to Nicktoons Network, which rejected it five times.^{[17]}^{[18]} When Nicktoons' rights to commission a full series expired, Frederator pitched it to other channels.^{[14]}^{: 32 } One of the studios that Frederator approached was Cartoon Network, which was interested in producing a full series, but would commit to a deal only if Ward could prove the pilot "wasn't a one-hit wonder".^{[17]} Rob Sorcher, the chief content officer at Cartoon Network, was influential in getting the network to take a chance on the show; he recognized the series as "something that felt really indie ... comic book-y [and] new".^{[14]}^{: 32 }

Cartoon Network asked Ward to submit a sample script for their consideration, but Frederator convinced him to rough out a storyboard instead, as "a board would give a better sense of what was on Pen's mind", according to Frederator's vice president Eric Homan.^{[17]} Ward and his college friends Patrick McHale and Adam Muto (the former of whom served as a writer, storyboard artist, and creative director for the show during its first few seasons, while the latter served as a storyboard artist and creative director for the show before becoming its showrunner) began developing ideas, all the while concentrating on "keep[ing] the good things about the original short [while also] improv[ing] on" them.^{[17]}

</sup>^{[14]}^{: 83 } The group's first product was a rough storyboard featuring Finn and Princess Bubblegum going on a spaghetti-supper date.^{[17]} Cartoon Network was not happy with this story, and so Ward, McHale, and Muto created a storyboard for the episode "[The Enchiridion!](/wiki/The_Enchiridion! "The Enchiridion!")", an attempt to emulate the style of the original Nicktoons short. This tactic proved successful, and in September 2008, Cartoon Network approved a first season, which was produced by [Cartoon Network Studios](/wiki/Cartoon_Network_Studios "Cartoon Network Studios"). "The Enchiridion!" was the first episode to enter into production.^{[17]}^{[19]}^{[20]}^{[21]}

Ward and his production team began storyboarding episodes and writing plot outlines, but Cartoon Network was still concerned about the direction of the new series. McHale later recalled that during the pitch of an episode titled "Brothers in Insomnia" (which, for various reasons, was scrapped) the room was filled with executives from Cartoon Network. The pitch went well, but the production staff was soon inundated with questions about the stylistic nature of the series. Around this time, Cartoon Network paused the production of the show in an attempt to resolve these creative issues.^{[22]}^{: 114 } A number of writers and animators were let go, and in their place, Cartoon Network management hired three veteran animators who had worked on [SpongeBob SquarePants](/wiki/SpongeBob_SquarePants "SpongeBob SquarePants"): Derek Drymon (who served as executive producer for the first season of Adventure Time), Merriwether Williams (who served as head story editor for the show's first and second seasons), and Nick Jennings \(artist\) "Nick Jennings (artist)") (who became the series' long-serving art director).^{[22]}^{: 114 }^{[14]}^{: 35 } Drymon, in particular, played a key role at this time, ensuring that both Cartoon Network and the show's production crew were on the same creative page.^{[22]}^{: 114 } [Thurop Van Orman](/wiki/Thurop_Van_Orman "Thurop Van Orman"), the creator of The Marvelous Misadventures of Flapjack, was also hired to guide Ward and his staff for the first two seasons.^{[14]}^{: 40 } The storyboard for "Prisoners of Love" assuaged many of the fears some Cartoon Network executives had expressed.^{[23]}

As production for season one progressed, more artists were brought on board. [Ghostshrimp](/wiki/Ghostshrimp "Ghostshrimp") Dan "Ghostshrimp" Bandit, a freelance illustrator who had also written and storyboarded on Flapjack, was hired as the show's lead background designer; Ward told him to create background art that set the show "in a 'Ghostshrimp World'"></sup>^{[8]}^{[24]} Ghostshrimp designed major locations, including Finn and Jake's home, the Candy Kingdom, and the Ice Kingdom.^{[24]} The position of lead character designer was given to Phil Rynda, who held this role for two and a half seasons. The show's lead production crew (which included Ward and McHale) was initially hesitant to bring him on board, but they were soon convinced by director [Larry Leichliter](/wiki/Larry_Leichliter "Larry Leichliter"), who assured them Rynda was talented and could draw in a variety of styles.<sup class="

A storyboard panel drawn by Adam Muto for the episode "What Was Missing" showing action, dialogue, and sound effects. Adventure Time is a storyboard-driven series. This means the storyboard artists are also the writers, allowing them to draft the dialogue and the action how they see fit.

Ward—a self-professed fan of ambivalent emotions, such as feeling "happy and scared at the same time"—has called the show a "dark comedy". He has also cited the fantasy role-playing game Dungeons & Dragons—of which many of the show's writers are devotees—as an inspiration for the show.

In the United States, the series is rated TV-PG; Ward said he never wanted to push the boundaries of the PG rating, noting in an interview with Art of the Title that he "never really even thought about the rating ... we don't like stuff that's overly gross. We like cute stuff and nice things". Ward intended the show's world to have a coherent physical logic, and although magic exists in the story, the show's writers tried to create an internal consistency in the characters' interactions with the world.

In an interview with The A.V. Club, Ward said the show's writing process usually began with the writers telling each other what they had done the previous week to find something humorous to build on. He also said, "A lot of the time, if we're really stuck, we'll start saying everything that comes to our mind, which is usually the worst stuff, and then someone else will think that's terrible but it'll give him a better idea and the ball just starts rolling like that". Because of the busy schedule of writing and coordinating a television series, the writers did not have time to play Dungeons and Dragons, but they still wrote stories they would "want to be playing D&D with". Sometimes, the writers and storyboard artists convened and played writing games. One game that was often used is called Exquisite corpse; one writer starts a story on a sheet of paper, and another writer tries to finish it.

But while a few episodes (such as the fifth-season episode "Puhoy" and the Adventure Time season 6 episode "Jake the Brick") have been generated using this game, Ward has said that "the ideas are usually terrible". Former storyboard artist and creative director Cole Sanchez said episode scripts are either created by expanding the good ideas produced by these writing games, or are based on an idea proposed by a storyboard artist in the hope it can be developed into an episode.

The series' voice actors include Jeremy Shada (Finn the Human), John DiMaggio (Jake the Dog), Tom Kenny (The Ice King), Hynden Walch (Princess Bubblegum), and Olivia Olson (Marceline the Vampire Queen). Ward voices several minor characters and Lumpy Space Princess. Former storyboard artist Niki Yang voices the sentient video game console BMO in English, as well as Jake's girlfriend Lady Rainicorn in Korean. Polly Lou Livingston, a friend of Ward's mother Bettie Ward, voices the small elephant Tree Trunks.^{9}</sup>^{346}^{52}</sup>

The Adventure Time cast members recorded their lines together at group recording sessions rather than individually, with the aim of recording natural-sounding dialogue.^{53}</sup> Hynden Walch has described these group recordings as akin to "doing a play reading—a really, really out there play".^{54}</sup> The series regularly employed guest actors for minor and recurring characters,^{55}</sup> and crew members cast people with whom they were interested in working. For instance, in a panel, Muto and Kent Osborne said the Adventure Time crew often sought out actors who had had roles in the television programs Star Trek: The Next Generation and The Office (American TV series) to play various supporting or background characters.^{56}</sup></sup></sup></sup></sup>

When Ward was developing the series' title sequences, the rough draft version consisted of quick shots and vignettes that were "just sort of crazy [and] nonsensical", which alluded to the show's theme of quirky adventures.^{33}</sup> These drafts included "the characters ... just punching random ghosts and monsters, jumping through anything and everything [and] there were a bunch of atomic bombs at the end of it".^{33}</sup> Ward later called this version "really silly".^{33}</sup> He sent the draft to Cartoon Network; they did not like it and wanted something more graphical like the introduction to The Brady Bunch. Inspired by the title sequences of The Simpsons and Pee-wee's Playhouse, Ward developed a new title sequence featuring a panning sweep of the Land of Ooo while a synthesizer note rose slowly until the main theme was played. Ward's draft for this idea was handed to layout animators, who then finalized the timing for the sequence. From there, the sequence evolved; while Ward added "silly character stuff", Patrick McHale focused his attention on the Ice King's shot and gave him a "high school [year]book" smile. The crew also struggled to get the shadows in the shot featuring Marceline correct.^{33}</sup> After the panning sweep, the sequence cuts to the theme song, which plays while shots of Finn and Jake adventuring are shown. For this part of the sequence, Ward was inspired by the "simple" aspects of the introduction to the 2007 comedy film Superbad. When the theme mentions "Jake the Dog" and "Finn the Human", the characters' names are displayed next to their heads, with a solid color in the background.^{34}</sup></sup></sup></sup></sup></sup>

cite_note-aotmusicrev-37>[33]</sup> The sequence was finalized immediately before the series aired.^{[33]}

The show's eponymous theme song is sung by Ward, accompanied by a ukulele. It is first heard in the pilot episode; in that version, Ward is accompanied by an acoustic guitar. For the version used in the series, Ward sang in a higher register to match the ukulele's range.^{[33]} The theme song's final version was originally supposed to be a temporary version. Ward said, "I recorded the lyrics for the opening title in the animatics room where we have this little crummy microphone just so that we could add it to the titles and submit it to the network. Later, we tried re-recording it and I didn't like it ... I only liked the temp one!"^{[33]} Because the series' finalized theme song was originally recorded as a temp track, ambient noises can be heard throughout. For instance, the sound of Derek Drymon typing can be heard while Jake is walking through the Ice Kingdom. According to Ward, much of the series' music has similar "hiss and grit" because one of the show's original composers, Casey James Basichis, "lives in a pirate ship he's built inside of an apartment [and] you can hear floorboards squeak and lots of other weird sounds".^{[33]} As the show progressed, Basichis's friend Tim Kiefer joined the show as an additional composer.^{[57]} The two now work together on its music.^{[58]}

The show's title sequence and theme song have stayed mostly consistent throughout its run, with seven exceptions. During the episodes featuring Fionna Campbell and Cake the Cat (viz. season three's "Fionna and Cake", season five's "Bad Little Boy", season six's "The Prince Who Wanted Everything", season eight's "Five Short Tables", and season nine's "Fionna and Cake and Fionna") the series runs a different intro sequence that mirrors the original, with the major exception that all the characters are gender-bent, and the theme is sung by former storyboard revisionist Natasha Allegri.^{[59]} Likewise, the intro to the series' three miniseries are each unique: the introduction to the Marceline-centric Stakes (2015) places most of the emphasis on Marceline, and the theme song is sung by Olson;^{[60]} the introduction to Islands (2017) adopts a nautical theme, highlights the principal characters in the miniseries, and is sung by Shada;^{[61]} and the intro to Elements (2017) features imagery reflecting the four primary elements in the Adventure Time universe (that is: fire, ice, slime, and candy) and is sung by Hynden Walch.^{[62]} The introductions to the guest-animated episodes "A Glitch Is a Glitch" and "Food Chain" are each unique, featuring animation courtesy of O'Reilly and Yuasa, respectively.^{[63]}^{[64]} Finally, the series finale, "Come Along With Me", features an introduction offering viewers a glimpse of future Ooo, 1,000 years after Finn and Jake. This intro features the new characters Remy and Beth and is sung by the latter (voiced by Willow Smith).^{[65]}

The series regularly features songs and musical numbers. Many of the cast members—including Shada, Kenny, and Olson—sing their characters' songs.^{54}^{66}^{67} Characters often express their emotions in song; examples of this include Marceline's song "I'm Just Your Problem" (from season three's "What Was Missing" title="What Was Missing">What Was Missing") and Finn's "All Gunned Up Inside" (from season three's "Incendium" title="Incendium">Incendium).^{68}^{69} While the series' background music is composed by Basic 616 and Kiefer, the songs sung by characters are often written by the storyboard artists.^{70}^{71} And while it is a general rarity, the show also occasionally refers to popular music.^{72} Early during the show's run, Frederator, Seibert's production company, occasionally uploaded demos and full versions of songs sung by the characters to their official website,^{73} and when the production crew set up a series Tumblr account, this tradition of publishing demos and full versions of songs to the public was revived.^{74} On November 20, 2015, the label Spacelab9 released a limited-edition 12" LP featuring many of Marceline's songs,^{75} followed by a 38-song series soundtrack in October 2016.^{76}

Setting and mythology

The show is set in the fictional "Land of Ooo", in a post-apocalyptic future about a thousand years after a nuclear holocaust called the "Great Mushroom War".^{14}^{78} According to Ward, the show takes place "after the bombs have fallen and magic has come back into the world".^{77} Before the series was fully developed, Ward intended the Land of Ooo to simply be "magical". After the production of the episode "Business Time", in which an iceberg containing reanimated businessmen floats to the surface of a lake, the show became explicitly post-apocalyptic; Ward said the production crew "just ran with it".^{79} Ward later described the setting as "candyland on the surface and dark underneath",^{10} noting he had never intended the Mushroom War and the post-apocalyptic elements to be "hit over the head in the show".^{80} He limited it to "cars buried underground in the background [and other elements that do not] raise any eyebrows".^{81} Ward has said the series' post-apocalyptic elements were influenced by the 1979 film Mad Max \(film\).^{82} Kenny called the way the elements are worked into the plot "very fill-in-the-blanks", and DiMaggio said, "it's been obvious the Land of Ooo has some issues".^{82}

Zeroing in on the relationship between Marceline and Bubblegum, Sugar tried to foster their relationship. In a March 2021 interview, Sugar said that she was encouraged by the "creative team to put their own life experiences into the character of Marceline," but when this led to a "romantic storyline between Marceline and Princess Bubblegum", executives intervened. This moment led Sugar and the rest of the show's team to see the limit of what they could accomplish, in terms of representation. The writers initially responded to this roadblock by working queer the mes into episodes as subtext to avoid controversy or network censorship, but later episodes would openly expand on these themes, bringing them to the forefront of the series' plot.

According to Osborne, Cartoon Network provided the writers with "an opportunity to spend a lot of time thinking about the finale" before production ended. ^{cite_ref-kentfinale_105-1 #cite_note-kentfinale-105} In an interview with [TV Guide](/wiki/TV_Guide "TV Guide"), Muto explained that the show's writers used many of the episodes preceding the finale to conclude minor character story arcs "so we wouldn't have to cram too much in at the very end here." ^{cite_ref-tvg_108-0 #cite_note-tvg-108} This allowed the finale itself to be "less dense" by simply "hitting the big [beats] and then finding vignettes for all the characters ... so we could get snapshots of where they could end up." ^{cite_ref-tvg_108-1 #cite_note-tvg-108} According to Pendarvis, storyline writing for the series ended in mid-November 2016, ^{cite_ref-stylus_109-0 #cite_note-stylus-109} with the last storyline meeting held on November 21. ^{cite_ref-finalmeetingtweet_110-0 #cite_note-finalmeetingtweet-110} A tweet by Osborne revealed that the series' final script was pitched to storyboarders, with Alden and Nyström in attendance, on November 28. ^{cite_ref-kenttweet_111-0 #cite_note-kenttweet-111} This episode was then pitched to the show's producers during the third week of December 2016. ^{cite_ref-insta-sam_114-0 #cite_note-insta-sam-114} Voice recording for the episode ended on January 31, 2017, as confirmed by a number of cast members, including [Maria Bamford](/wiki/Maria_Bamford "Maria Bamford") and [Andy Milonakis](/wiki/Andy_Milonakis "Andy Milonakis"). Each Adventure Time episode is about eleven minutes in length; pairs of episodes are often telecast in order to fill a half-hour program time slot. ^{cite_ref-120 #cite_note-120} Before the official debut of the first season, Cartoon Network aired both "Business Time" and "[Evicted!](/wiki/Evicted!  During the latter part of its run, the show began to experiment with the miniseries format. The first of these was Stakes (2015), which aired during the show's seventh season. The third and final miniseries, Elements (2017), aired during the show's ninth season.^{[120]}^{[121]}^{[122]}The show's seventh season was originally intended to comprise 39 episodes, ranging from "Bonnie & Neddy" to "Reboot". However, when it came time to upload the season onto streaming sites like CartoonNetwork.com, Cartoon Network chose to end the season with the episode "The Thin Yellow Line", for a total of 26 episodes. This new episode count for the season was cemented by the release of the complete seventh season DVD on July 18, 2017, which included episodes "Bonnie & Neddy" through "The Thin Yellow Line".^{[22]}^{: 159 } As such, the episode and season number sequence is accordingly changed, as follows:

For its first six seasons, episodes regularly aired once a week. Starting in November 2014, the show began to air new episodes via "bombs", or weeks in which new episodes debuted every day.^{cite_ref-thanksgivingschedule_132-0} This change in airing style disrupted the viewing patterns of some fans, as Dave Trumbore of Collider \(website\) explained: "Back when [the show] was regularly airing in a more traditional schedule, it was a little easier to keep track of the completely insane episodes full of half-explained mythology and lots and lots of non-sequiturs. During the last few seasons, however, [when] the episodes started to arrive in more of a scattershot fashion scheduled around multi-part specials [it became easier to miss] the random airings of certain episodes".^{cite_ref-133}

The series' initial run concluded in 2018, after the airing of its tenth season.^{cite_ref-finaleforgood_134-0} Reruns have aired on Boomerang \(TV network\) and Adult Swim.^{cite_ref-135}^{cite_ref-136}

The show has received universal acclaim from critics. The A.V. Club reviewer Zack Handlen called it "a terrific show [that] fits beautifully in that gray area between kid and adult entertainment in a way that manages to satisfy both a desire for sophisticated (i.e., weird) writing and plain old silliness".^{[164]}
Adventure Time has been complimented for its resemblance to cartoons of the past. In an article for the Los Angeles Times, television critic Robert Lloyd compared the series to "the sort of cartoons they made when cartoons themselves were young and delighted in bringing all things to rubbery life".^{[119]} Robert McLaughlin of Den of Geek expressed a similar sentiment when he wrote that Adventure Time "is the first cartoon in a long time that is pure imagination".^{[165]} He complimented the show for "its non-reliance on continually referencing pop culture".^{[165]} Eric Kohn of IndieWire said the show "represents the progress of [cartoon] medium" in the current decade.^{[166]}
A number of reviews have positively compared the series and its creators to other culturally significant works and individuals, respectively. In 2013, Entertainment Weekly reviewer Darren Franich called the series "a hybrid sci-fi/fantasy/horror/musical/fairy tale, with echoes of Calvin and Hobbes, Hayao Miyazaki, Final Fantasy, Richard Linklater, Where the Wild Things Are, and the music video you made with your high school garage band".^{[167]} Emily Nussbaum of The New Yorker praised Adventure Time's unique approach to emotion, humor, and philosophy by likening it to "World of Warcraft as recapped by Carl Jung".^{[168]} Zack Handlen of The A.V. Club concluded that the show was "basically what would happen if you asked a bunch of 12-year-olds to make a cartoon, only it's the best possible version of that, like if all the 12-year-olds were super geniuses and some of them were Stan Lee and Jack Kirby and the Marx Brothers".^{[164]}
Adventure Time's willingness to explore dark, sad, and complex issues has received praise. Kohn applauded the fact that the show "toys with an incredibly sad subtext".^{[166]} Novelist Lev Grossman, in an interview with NPR, praised the backstory of the Ice King and the exploration of his condition in the third-season episode "Holly Jolly Secrets", the fourth-season episode "I Remember You", and the fifth-season episode "Simon & Marcy", noting that his origin is "psychologically plausible".^{[169]} Grossman praised the way the series was able to tackle the issues of mental illness, saying: "It's very affecting. My dad has been going through having Alzheimer's, and he's forgotten so much about who he used to be. And I look at him and think this cartoon is about my father dying".^{[170]} an class="cite-bracket">[169]</sup> Critics have suggested that the show has grown and matured as it has aged. In a review of season four, for instance, Mike LeChevallier of Slant magazine complimented the show for "growing up" with its characters.^{[170]} He concluded that the series has "strikingly few faults" and awarded the fourth season three-and-a-half stars out of four.^{[170]}

The series has been included on a number of best-of lists. Entertainment Weekly awarded it second place in its 2012 list of "10 Best Cartoon Network Shows"^{[171]} and ranked it number 20 (out of 25) in a list of the "Greatest Animated TV Series".^{[163]}^{[172]} Similarly, The A.V. Club, in a non-ranked run-down of the "best animated series ever", called the series "one of the most distinctive cartoons currently on the air".^{[173]}

The show has also received limited criticism from reviewers. LeChevallier, in an otherwise largely positive review of the third season for Slant magazine, wrote that "the short-form format leaves some emotional substance to be desired", and that this was inevitable for a series with such short episodes.^{[174]} The independent cartoon scholar and critic David Perlmutter, who otherwise applauded the show's voice acting and its ability to surpass its source material, argued that the show's vacillation between high and low comedy epitomizes the fact that Cartoon Network is "unsure of what direction to pursue". He noted that "while some of [Adventure Time's] episodes work well, others [are] simply confusing".^{[9]}^{: 346 } The newspaper Metro cited the show's frightening situations, occasional adult themes, and use of innuendo as reasons why parents might not want their young children watching it.^{[175]}

 has influenced the tone of modern comics, noting:

If anything, walking around [comic] shows like [Small Press Expo](/wiki/Small_Press_Expo "Small Press Expo"), I've noticed something of an Adventure Time track among many of the small press comics now coming out: Where once young cartoonists overwhelmingly produced gloomy masculine self-absorption and misanthropy in the tradition of [Daniel Clowes](/wiki/Daniel_Clowes "Daniel Clowes") or [Chris Ware](/wiki/Chris_Ware "Chris Ware"), these days many booths feature fantasy epics with colorful characters and invented worlds heavy on the talking animals. It shouldn't be surprising that up-and-coming cartoonists are absorbing the Adventure Time aesthetic. A 20-year-old making comics now could have been watching the show since she was 15, after all. ^{a href="#cite_note-slateinfluence-189"} ><

In an interview with [Paper Magazine](/wiki/Paper_Magazine "Paper Magazine") magazine, Rebecca Sugar explained that working on Adventure Time and connecting with indie and underground comic artists who worked on the show (like Ward, McHale and Muto) was a creative game-changer, as they told her to do what she would do when drawing comics and to not hold anything back. She argued that many of the recent developments in animation were inspired by what the show was able to do by being "very artist-driven" and allowing independent comic artists to have a major say in the direction of episodes. ^{a href="#cite_note-Moen-94"} ><

Academic interest

Adventure Time has attracted academic interest for its presentation of gender and [gender roles](/wiki/Gender_role "Gender role"). Emma A. Jane, an academic from the [University of New South Wales](/wiki/University_of_New_South_Wales "University of New South Wales") in [Sydney](/wiki/Sydney "Sydney"), Australia, wrote that while the two main characters are male and many episodes involve them engaging in violent acts to save princesses, "Finn and Jake are [nevertheless] part of an expansive ensemble cast of characters who are anything but stereotypical and who populate a program which subverts many traditional gender-related paradigms". ^{a href="#cite_note-childrenmedia-190"} >< She said the show features "roughly equal numbers of female and male characters in a protagonist, antagonist, and minor roles"; includes characters with no fixed gender; uses "gendered 'design elements'" such as eyelashes and hair to illustrate character traits rather than gender; equally distributes traits regardless of gender; privileges found, adoptive families or [extended families](/wiki/Family#Extended_family "Family"); frames gender in ways that suggest it is [fluid](/wiki/Genderfluid "Genderfluid"), and features elements of [queer](/wiki/Queer "Queer") and [transgender](/wiki/Transgender "Transgender") sub-text. ^{a href="#cite_note-childrenmedia-190"} >< Carolyn Leslie, writing in Screen \(journal\) "Screen (journal)"), agrees, saying, "despite having two male leads, Adventure Time is particularly strong when it comes to questioning and challenging gender stereotypes". ^{a href="#cite_note-lesliegener-191"} >< She uses Princess Bubblegum, BM O, and Fionna and Cake as examples of characters who refuse to be readily categorized and genderized. ^{a href="#cite_note-lesliegener-191"} ><

The first non-fiction book to scholarly study the series was [iarchive:adventuretimephi0000unse](//archive.org/details/adventuretimephi0000unse "iarchive:adventuretimephi0000unse") Adventure Time and Philosophy (2015), edited by Nicolas Michaud. Published by [Open Court Publishing Company](/wiki/Open_Court_Publishing_Company "Open Court Publishing Company"), this work considers Adventure Time from a variety of angles, using the show as a way to explore different philosophical ideas. ^{a href="#cite_note-192"} >< In July 2020, independent scholar Paul A. Thomas released a book entitled Exploring the Land of Ooo that documented the show's production history; an expanded and updated version of the book was released in 2023 by the [University Press of Mississippi](/wiki/University_Press_of_Mississippi "University Press of Mississippi").^{file:///C:/Users/quira/Downloads/First Group Programming Assignment – Real-Time Big Data Analytics.html}

Since its debut, Adventure Time has developed a strong following among children, teenagers, and adults; according to A.V. Club critic Noel Murray, fans are drawn to Adventure Time because of "the show's silly humor, imaginative stories, and richly populated world".^{[31]} While the show is often described as having a cult following,^{[26]}^{[189]} Eric Kohn of IndieWire said that the series has "started to look like one of the biggest television phenomenons of the decade".^{[190]} According to Alex Heigl of People magazine, "The show's fandom is especially Internet-savvy as well, with huge communities on Reddit, Imgur and Tumblr, who swap GIFs, fan art and theories with fervent regularity".^{[191]} In 2016, a study by The New York Times of the 50 TV shows with the most Facebook Likes found that Adventure Time "is the most popular show among the young in our data—just over two-thirds of 'likes' come from viewers [aged] 18–24".^{[192]}

The show is popular at fan conventions, such as San Diego Comic-Con.^{[190]} Reporter Emma-Lee Moss said, "This year's [2014] Comic-Con schedule reflected Adventure Time's growing success, with several screenings [as well as] a dramatic reading with the show's voice talent".^{[193]} The show is also popular with cosplayers, or performance artists who wear costumes and fashion accessories to represent characters from the Adventure Time universe. Moss wrote, "Looking into the crowd, it was clear that [Finn's] distinctive blue shirt and white hat were being mirrored by hundreds of Cosplayers, male and female".^{[193]} In an interview, Olivia Olson (who voices the character Marceline) said, "Literally, anywhere you look, anywhere in your range, you're going to see at least two people dressed up like Finn. It's crazy".^{[194]}

Section Title: Premise

Section Content: Adventure Time follows the adventures of a boy named Finn the Human (voiced by Jeremy Shada), and his best friend and adoptive brother Jake the Dog (John DiMaggio), who has magical powers to change shape and size at will. Pendleton Ward, the series' creator, describes Finn as a "fiery little kid with strong morals".[8] Jake, on the other hand, is based on Tripper Harrison, Bill Murray's character in Meatballs. This means that while Jake is somewhat carefree, he will "sit [Finn] down and give him some decent advice if he really needs it".[8] Finn and Jake live in the post-apocalyptic Land of Ooo, which was ravaged by a cataclysmic event known as the "Mushroom War", a nuclear war that destroyed civilization a thousand years before the series' events. Throughout the series, Finn and Jake interact with major characters, including Princess Bubblegum (Hynden Walch), the sovereign of the Candy Kingdom and a sentient piece of gum; the Ice King (Tom Kenny), a menacing but largely misunderstood ice wizard; Marceline the Vampire Queen (Olivia Olson), a thousand-year-old vampire and rock music enthusiast; Lumpy Space Princess (Pendleton Ward), a melodramatic and immature princess made out of "lumps"; BMO (Niki Yang), a sentient video game console-shaped robot that lives with Finn and Jake; and Flame Princess (Jessica DiCicco), a flame elemental and ruler of the Fire Kingdom.[9]: 346 [10][11]

Section Title: Development

Section Content: According to series creator Pendleton Ward, the show's style was influenced by his time attending the California Institute of the Arts (CalArts) and his experiences working as a writer and storyboard artist on The Marvelous Misadventures of Flapjack, a series that ran on Cartoon Network from 2008 until 2010. In an interview with Animation World Network, Ward said he strove to combine Adventure Time's subversive humor with "beautiful" moments, using Hayao Miyazaki's film My Neighbor Totoro as inspiration for the latter.[8] Ward has also named Home Movies and Dr. Katz, Professional Therapist as influences, largely because both shows are "relaxing" and feature "conversational dialogue that feels natural [and is neither] over the top [nor] cartoony and shrill".[12]

Section Title: Broadcast and ratings

Section Content: Each Adventure Time episode is about eleven minutes in length; pairs of episodes are often telecast in order to fill a half-hour program time slot.[116] Before the official debut of the first season, Cartoon Network aired both "Business Time" and "Evicted!" on March 11 and 18, respectively, advertising these showings as "previews" of the series-to-come.[117][118] The show officially debuted with "Slumber Party Panic" on April 5, 2010.[119]

Section Title: Reception

Section Content: "Adventure Time makes me wish I were a kid again, just so I could grow up to be as awesome as the kids who are currently watching Adventure Time will be".

Section Title: Related media

Section Content: On October 23, 2019, Cartoon Network announced that four hour-long specials—collectively titled Adventure Time: Distant Lands—would air on HBO Max. The specials aired in 2020 and 2021. On August 17, 2021, it was announced that a second spin-off, Adventure Time: Fionna and Cake, focusing on the gender-swapped Fionna and Cake characters, had been ordered by HBO Max.[195] On June 12, 2024, it was revealed that two additional spin-offs, entitled Adventure Time: Side Quests and Adventure Time: Heyo BMO, had also been greenlit by Cartoon Network Studios.[196]
